

affected by the distribution of the farms according to major source of income. For these reasons it should not be assumed that the comparisons on major source of income, presented in the graphs for the United States and the South, represent average relationships which apply to all areas. A careful study of the figures for States and geographic divisions by major-source classes is necessary for correct interpretation of the figures.

