

The 79.6 million acres of corn harvested in 1959 represent a 2 percent increase above the acreage harvested in 1954. Favorable weather conditions, the removal of government acreage allotments in commercial producing areas, and an increase in government support prices were the principal reasons for the increase in acreage.

