Size of farms—Farms with sales of $2,500 and over were substantially larger than farms with sales of under $2,500. As for all farms, part-owner farms were much larger than farms in the other tenure groups. Thirty-seven percent of the part-owner farms were 500 acres and over, compared with 11 percent for full-owner farms and 20 percent for tenant farms. Data for size of farms are shown in table 16.

Value of land and buildings—The value of land and buildings provides another measure of the resources available for agricultural production within each tenure category. Of the total $308.9 billion of value, part owners reported $160.1 billion, full owners $103.5 billion, and tenants $45.3 billion. Part owners reported a value of $283,000 per farm. This value was almost 2½ times the average value of full-owner farms.

More than 70 percent of the part-owners reported their farm value at $100,000 and over. In comparison, 53 percent of the tenants and only 31 percent of the full owners reported that high a value. There were twice as many full owners, 1½ times as many part owners, and 1⅓ times as many tenants in this group as compared with 1969. Almost one-third of the full owners reported their farms to be valued at less than $40,000. A percent distribution of the value of land and buildings by tenure for farms with sales of $2,500 and over is shown in table 17.

Value of agricultural products sold—Approximately 48 percent of the $81 billion of agricultural products sold on farms with sales of $2,500 and over was produced on farms operated by part owners. Farms operated by full owners accounted for 38 percent and tenant farms the remaining 14 percent. The average value of sales for part owners was $68,000 compared with $34,000 for full owners and $51,000 for tenants.

Part-owner farms accounted for almost three-fifths of the value of cash grain, cotton, field seeds, vegetables, hay, forage, and silage sold from all farms with sales of $2,500 and over in 1974. Tenant

The most common share arrangements will specify that the landlord will receive one-third, two-fifths, or one-half of the products produced depending on the share of inputs contributed by the landlord.

Over three-fourths of the livestock-share tenants were located in the North Central States. This type of leasing is often used by older owner operators who have sizeable cattle or hog operations in which they wish to maintain a direct participating interest. Table 15 shows the regional distribution of tenure for farms with sales of $2,500 and over.
